Spread of Risk:

Companies are more likely to insure perils that offer a good spread of risk. Flood insurance is an example of a poor spread of risk because the people most likely to buy it are the people close to rivers and other bodies of water that flood.

Surplus Lines:

A term originating in property/casualty insurance, used to describe any risk or part thereof for which insurance is not available through a company licensed in the applicant's state (an "admitted" insurer). The business, therefore, is placed with "non-admitted" insurers (insurers not licensed in the state) in accordance with surplus or excess lines provisions of state insurance laws. These provisions generally allow operations on a relatively unregulated basis; that is, the non-admitted insurer is not subject to the same rate or coverage requirements that apply to an admitted insurer.

Term:

A period of time for which a policy is issued.

Territorial Rating:

An employee of an insurance company who is a selector of risks. The underwriter is expected to select business that will produce an average risk of loss no greater than anticipated for the class of business. In the life insurance industry, “underwriter,” may also mean an agent or other field representative who is referred to as a “field underwriter.”

Underwriting:

The process of selecting risks for insurance and determining in what amounts and on what terms the insurance company accepts the risk.
